

Panagia's Tears

Tradition holds that a monk living on Mt. Athos was sad because he could not master the special knot used to make wool prayer ropes. This monk prayed to the Theotokos and she appeared to him with such tenderness, saying, "My child, take my tears, cultivate them, and make prayer ropes with which men may say the prayer of the heart."

Illumination Learning
www.illumination-learning.com

Panagia's Tears

Tradition holds that a monk living on Mt. Athos was sad because he could not master the special knot used to make wool prayer ropes. This monk prayed to the Theotokos and she appeared to him with such tenderness, saying, "My child, take my tears, cultivate them, and make prayer ropes with which men may say the prayer of the heart."

Illumination Learning
www.illumination-learning.com

